There is quite a feeling in this county against the present County Court system.
It is apparent that at an early day an effort will be made to rid the county of this intolorable public nuisance—noreference to the worthy gentlemen who compose the Court. It is the system not the men that is being condemned.

A Thrilling Debate Up at Wash-ington, Pa.

A Thrilling Bebate Up at Washington, Par.

Review and Ezaminer.

The negro Literary (?) Society, in this Borough, had quite an exciting debating contest, recently. The question was a triangular one, of thrilling interest, via: "A man standing on the bank of a river, opposite an island, saw a woman, on the island, in great distress. Man No. 1 told man No. 2, and the latter went to the sufferer's relief and brought her to his house. As she was still suffering, he went for a physician, who administered remedies that restored the patient. Now, which deserved the most credit for restoring the woman—the one who first saw her; the one who rescued her, or the physician. "A number of debators, of each sex, were expected to take part in the discussion, but all dickered save orator Crockett—not a descendant of Davy, but that other man—and Mijah Dexter, the motive power on the Review and Ezuminer's new press. As a runist, danciet, singist and ventriloquist the Mijah's reputstion had long been as envisable as extensive, but few knew of his oratorioni powers. He had not spoken over an hour and a half until "Hayti" was in a blaze of effulgent elequence. Not a bird sitred, Sheep-dogs hid themselves over an hour and a half until "Hayti" was in a blaze of effulgent eloquence. Not a bird sitred. Sheep-dogs hid themselves and chicken-thieves—white and black—went under cover. Not a leaf stirred to mar the fluent and effective flow of the Mijah's brilliant plea in behalf "ob de 'stinguished services ob de doctah." Every key in his melodious bugle was under practical control, and when he put his full weight on his speaking levers the result was more fascinating than the musio of the best calliope ever invented.
After holding his large and intelligent audience perfectly entranced, for three hours—more or less—hy inhaled about nine cubic feet of atmosphere, and, selecting his opponent as a target, discharged an irresistible volume of burning vituperation. That concluded the polemic struggle. Opposition was silenced —not even a Crockett atirred—and Msjah Poindexter retired with a wreath of victory upon his dusky brow.

PROBABLY the most curious charge ever made by a Judge to a jury was delivered in St. Louis during the anti-slavery excitement forty years ago. A mulatto, who had killed a policeman, was taken out of jail at night by a mob, tied to a tree, and coasted to death. It became the duty of Judge Lawless to bring the matter be-fore the Grand Jury, and the Alton (III.)

Telegraph relates that he did so in the fol-lowing language:

If the destruction of the murderer of HAMMOND was the act of the many,—of the multitude in the ordinary sense of hose words, -not the act of numerable and ascertainable malefactors, but of congregated thousands, saizedu pon and impelled by that mysterious, metaphysical, and almost electrical frenzy, which, in all signs and natious, has hurried the infuriated multitude to deeds of death and destruction,—then, I say, act not at all in this matter; the case then transcends your jurisdiction,—it is beyond the reach of human law.
